The Earth is a place which is shared by all the living organisms on it. We all live here as a global family. There is always a relationship in between any two living organisms on the Earth. The relationships already exists within us, it is not required to be established explicitly. These pre-established relationships, if followed, lead to the mutual harmony in all the living entities in the world.

A lot of relationships exist. The human-human relationships, the relationships between humans and the animals, the relationships between the animals and the plants and the lists goes on extending. In any relationship, there are 9 major natural feelings as follows :-

1. Trust
2. Respect
3. Affection
4. Care
5. Guidance
6. Reverence
7. Glory
8. Gratitude
9. Love

The most important of these is the Trust. There should always be a mutual trust in any type of the relationship.

The human-human relationships which we see around include our family relationships and the relationships within the society. Every living organism which teaches you something is a teacher, and you are a student. It is one of the most respected relation in our society. A teacher tries to make his student to explore the world and learn new things from even very small things.

Whatever be the relation, is on 2 wheels. Even if one loses its balance, the other should take over and overcome the situation. It is a law of the nature, that, nothing is consistent. Everything keeps on changing. So, it is very important to keep mutual faith and maintain the relation.
